AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES PROGRAM

Brandon Chapman

Major: African American Studies and Political Science

Among his many achievements while at the College, Political Science and African American Studies Double-Major Brandon Chapman attended the Ralph Bunche Summer Institute (RBSI) at Duke University last summer. This intensive five-week program is named in honor of the 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner, Ralph J. Bunche. The competitive program introduces doctoral study to undergraduate students from under-represented racial and ethnic groups. Brandon's acceptance in RBSI has already placed him in a very elite group of minority political science students from around the country; we are very proud of him for that and looking for great things from him in the future.
